Program Overview
The WorkSmart Network’s Dislocated Worker Program gives you access to services and support to help you get back to work as soon as possible and minimize the disruptions on your life that a layoff can cause.

Services & Offerings
If you’re looking for help with finding employment, defining a career path, connecting to training and updating your skills, or learning about other resources that can help you transition back into the workforce, we can help!

Employer Connections & Placement Assistance
Not only can we help you polish up your resume and interview skills, we’ll use our network of employer connections to identify available jobs that match your skills and market you to potential employers.

Training & Skill Development
We can help you identify how skills from previous work experiences transfer to your next job. And if you need to up-skill, we can connect you to opportunities like on-the-job training, apprenticeships, and short- and long-term training programs. Plus, there may even be financial support available to you.

Career Planning
Unsure of what’s next in your career? Talk to us. We can give you insight on hot jobs and growing industries with labor market information to help you choose and take the next steps toward a rewarding career pathway.

Work Readiness
Get ready to market yourself to employers with help from our work readiness workshops and boot camps around resumes, labor market information, transferable skills, employment readiness and interviewing preparation.

Support Services & Resources
We’re part of the American Job Center network, which means we’re connected to other local community and workforce organizations that are ready to help you too. We can refer you to local sources for assistance with housing, transportation, health insurance, financial literacy and more to help you during your transition.
